PROHIBITION AND TEMPERANCE.

Francis Murphy, the "Gospel temperance" reformer, has taken the Prohibition party to very severely for interfering with his work at Youngstown, Ohio. He utterly condemned dragging the temperance movement into politics, and declared that despite the strict prohibition law of Maine for so many years, a great deal of whisky is drunk there, and that it was as easy to get a drink in Iowa or Kansas as it was in any non-prohibition State. Temperance was a personal matter, and had nothing to do with politics. "Prohibition," he said, "never accomplished anything. It never made a man sober or a home happy. By its fruits shall ye know it. Pay no attention to the man who says: 'Elect me and I'll pass a law, and if you don't obey it I'll put you in jail.' Make your own prohibitory law. Extend your fellowship to your neighbor and help him. Try love, not law. Laws can't make a man sober. Try moral suasion, not force. When a man who has taken the pledge fails, help him up and stand by him; stick to him. Nothing can make a man safe from drink except God and his own will. Why, up in Sing Sing Prison, within the walls of a penitentiary, the strongest hold of the law, a convict came out the other day who had found a way of making whisky out of the peelings of potatoes and turnips and apples and the refuse of the table, and he had actually made thousands of dollars peddling whisky under the very nose of the law. Prohibition don't prevent it."

This has the ring of the sound metal. It is the opinion of a man who understands what he is talking about, and who is also in earnest. Temperance reform is Francis Murphy's life work, and he is not enamored of political temperance movements. They simply bring discredit upon the good work, which should be one of moral suasion and social influence. Should the Prohibitionists of the United States persist in a distinct organization, or attempt to dictate to either of the great political parties, they will antagonize many friends of temperance and postpone the great reform now in progress in America.

REVIEW.

"Salaambo"—A Novel.

Saxon & Co., of London and New York, have recently published an English translation of Gustave Flaubert's famous historical novel, "Salaambo." The original, written over twenty years ago, earned for its traveler and erudite author the title of the founder of the modern school of French realistic and naturalistic literature, a style which bolder and less scrupulous hands, playing upon the chords of the inherent immoral life of man, have broadened and debased into passionate and sensualistic license.

It is creditable to M. French Sheldon, the translator, that he has succeeded in reproducing, in a hitherto considered untranslatable work, to a very great extent the true spirit of the original, its studied sentences and almost its lyric rhythm and oriental coloring. On his part it has evidently been a conscientious effort.

To the minds of the majority of English readers, however, "Salaambo" will appear coarsely brutal in its realistic descriptions of bloody warfare, barbaric cruelty, demoniacal rapine, ravage and debauchery, with the more refined and far more interesting works of Kingsley's "Hypatia" and Bulwer's "Last Days of Pompeii." To the archaeologist and the poet, to the playwright and the artist, it will continue to be, as it has been in the past, a perfect treasure house of ripened student lore and inspiring suggestions.

It is a great poem, in which morality has but a secondary consideration, and it is one written by a master hand. It deals with the era when Carthage was struggling for existence against the attacks of the barbarians and mercenaries, and the great Hannibal was but a boy. His father, Hamilcar Barca, is the leading figure, and Salaambo, Hamilcar's daughter the heroine, while Matho, the leader of the barbarian host, is the tragedy hero. To those who have not forgotten the history of this very exciting period of the world's age, and can read with interest the details of the bloody and cruel sacrificial rites of Moloch, Baal and the ancient cults, and are not easily nauseated with descriptions of slaughter and lust, the story will be found superb in its word painting and fascinating in its diablerie. It is not a book, however, which should be put into the hands of young people.

SESSIONAL STATISTICS.

Work Done by the Legislative Assembly, Session of 1886.

The Legislative Assembly of 1886, which was brought to a close on Saturday, stands as the longest on record. It opened at noon, April 30th, and has been in session five and a half months, the actual number of days during which it was sitting being one hundred and twenty-nine. A recess of fourteen days was taken during the session. On July 1st there was a change of Ministry, and again on October 13th, three days before the session closed.

The actual time the House sat was 493 hours and 50 minutes.

The number of petitions presented was 331.

Reports of standing committees, 210. Reports of select and special committees, 102.

Resolutions presented, 201.

Bills introduced, 177.

Bills approved, 69.

Bills vetoed, 11.

The number of columns of minion type printed in this paper of the proceedings was 385. As a column measures 21 inches, this would give 225 yards of printed matter, which, if laid out, would reach from this office to very near the Government building.

The total number of "ems" printed was 2,158,070, which would make nearly five million letters.

Soyung Shooting Case.

In the Supreme Court yesterday morning at 10 o'clock the case of the King vs. Soyung, assault with a deadly weapon, to-wit, a pistol, was heard before Mr. Justice Preston and a foreign jury. It was an appeal from the Police Court, where the defendant was found guilty and sentenced to six months' imprisonment. The following jury was sworn: Henry Waterhouse, F. Gertz, J. A. Kennedy, L. C. Ables, H. W. Nicoll, J. A. Clunie, A. Gartenberg, T. Lindsay, F. Lewis, G. P. Castle, A. Ehlers and J. W. Hingley. Major Rosa appeared for the Crown, and Hon. Paul Neumann for defendant. The evidence was quite lengthy, and the case was not given to the jury until 7:45 o'clock in the evening. At 9:20 Mr. Justice Preston called the jury in and asked them if they had agreed upon a verdict, which was answered in the negative. They were sent out again, but returned at 10 o'clock, when Mr. Waterhouse, the foreman, said they were unable to agree to a verdict. His Honor discharged them. For a long time they stood 6 to 6, and the final ballot was 7 for acquittal and 5 for conviction.
